INTERNATIONALER BIERTAG—INTERNATIONAL BEER DAY

- The first Friday of August every year is International Beer Day.
- The unofficial holiday celebrates the art and science of brewing beer and encourages people to try out new flavors of beer.

10 TIMES GERMANS PROVED THEY REALLY, REALLY LOVE BEER

8. When firefighters were brought in to rescue someone's stash of beer:

When 2 friends stepped off a train for a smoke break, they were distraught to see the train pull away without them. But they weren't bothered about being delayed in reaching their destination—they left a bag of beers on board. In their distress, they set off the emergency alarm, calling firefighters to the scene.

9. When German firefighters built a fire truck out of beer crates:

This was definitely an earnest attempt to win a Guinness World Record, and not an Excuse to drink a lot of beer.

10. When parents demanded their children be allowed entry to a “child-free” beer garden:

Proof that in Germany beer is not just something you drink in order to get drunk, but an important part of many people's social lives: parents were not pleased when children were barred from a local beer garden.
