Germany's oldest Christmas market takes place in Dresden's beautiful old market square and is visited by 2.5 million people every year. The word Striezelmarkt comes from the name of a type of cake sold at the market, now famous as Stollen or Christstollen. The Dresden Stollenfest will take place at the market on December 8th.

It is not only stollen that the Striezelmarkt has to offer though - it crowns a gingerbread princess on December 2nd and there are plenty of traditional Christmas market wares such as craft stalls and Glühwein.

The festival opens on November 28th and will close on December 24th.
