6 REASONS GERMANY'S SUMMER IS BEST FOR THRILL-SEEKERS

Punting in the Spreewald

For those who like to take things more casually a languid paddle through the Spreewald south-east of Berlin could be more your style.

The city of Lübbenau in the heart of the forest has been known as 'the city of punts' since the mid-19th Century when residents would use the wooden boats to navigate the impassable ancient forest.

You can still hire a Kahnfährmann – a ferryman – to take you through the narrow irrigation canals.

And if even that becomes a bit too much you can stop off at an idyllic Stübchen on the river and order yourself a pancake and a refreshing Apfelschorle.
