GERMANY'S 8 WURST SAUSAGE SAYINGS

7) 'Du armes Würstchen': "You poor little sausage" has more or less the same meaning as it does in English, but with a patronizing note thrown in for good measure. Depending on how it's said, it can mean you generally feel sorry for someone, or you're being ironic if you think their misfortune has been brought on by themselves.

8) 'Sein Senf dazu geben': We can't complete this sausage-themed list without a dollop of mustard. Literally translated as "To give your mustard" it means to add your two penny's worth. It originates from the 17th century when taverns would add the condiment to every dish, whether it was requested or not, believing it enhanced the meal. This was later applied to a person giving their opinion in a conversation where it was (for the most part) unwanted.
