FAMILIENGEBRÄUCHE / FAMILY CUSTOMS*15 KEY STATS THAT DESCRIBE GERMANS TODAY

Whether related to marriage or beer consumption, here are 15 fun statistics that describe how Germans live, work, play and think.

The average woman in Germany is 29.6 years old when she has her first child.

Most women in Germany have their first child around the age of 30.

In comparison to the US where women have their first child at 26.4 and France at 28.5 years, women in Germany welcome their first child into the world fairly late.

This could result from the increasing importance placed on a successful career. "First the job, then a family," is a mentality held by many.

Unlike in earlier days, most women seek out a career and do not desire to work at home. Not only because they strive for success in their line of work, but also because only a stable job can support themselves and eventually a family
