Germany has also had a female defence minister, Annegret Kramp-Karrenbauer, the country's second.

The first, Ursula von der Leyen, took over in December 2013. Both women have been responsible for overseeing the Bundeswehr's domestic and overseas' operations.

Nowadays, there are almost 22,000 women from around 180,000 people in total.

The average German receives 24 packages per year. (The only country with more is China, at 70 per person per year)

This means that around 200 million packages must be delivered per year which is almost 550 thousand each day (which includes holidays).

The poor parcel messengers have an impossible job!

21.82 percent of Germans have visited a doctor in the last month (as of June 2019)
