FAMILIENGEBRÄUCHE / FAMILY CUSTOMS*15 KEY STATS THAT DESCRIBE GERMANS TODAY

This could result from Germany's great health care system, since you pay a monthly fee that covers most or standard examination.

This means you do not have to worry, money-wise, about going to the doctor for a regular check up.

But, this occurrence could also result from the fact that it is fairly easy to get a doctor's excuse when you're sick or simply feeling under the weather.

44 percent of caregivers for the elderly in Germany work part-time, whilst 56 percent are full-time.

This job is not highly sought out, and as such has a shortage of workers. This is why you constantly sees advertisements, in the U-Bahn for example, that promote this job.

59 percent of German companies say that they use internet job portals to find staff. A total of 29 percent still use ads in print media.

Searching for jobs nowadays is easy: You simply type in your preferred job field into Google and Google spits out the offers.

These offers are usually found on job portals such as Stepstone or Stellenanzeigen, which accumulate job offers and allow you to search for your ideal job.

This makes it simple to browse through your option.

Most companies even accept or demand an online application either directly on their site or via email.

In Germany 4 percent of people say they pay with cryptocurrencies

Few people are familiar or even aware of cryptocurrencies, because it is a fairly modern and, for many, suspicious payment method.

The most common and well-known digital asset is Bitcoin which launched 2009.
