Charmian Carr (Liesl von Trapp)

The eldest of the seven children is this 16-going on 17-year-old girl who is curious about love and life- and definitely doesn't need a governess. She shows her skills throughout, highlighted by her and Rolfe's rain-soaked gazebo performance which is pretty mesmerizing. Her mother arranged the audition and she was so fresh, the publicists at Fox felt entitled to circulate false rumors about her to generate buzz. Most notably that she had lied about her age when auditioning. Odd move, Fox.

Carr was twenty-two at the time when she starred in The Sound of Music and admitted in her autobiography that she was attracted to the 35-year-old Plummer, who played her father. Plummer would later state that the feeling was mutual, but insists that it didn't get beyond mere flirtation.
